Campus parking lot proposed

Planned between Co-op and Psych. building

By Colin Poitras
Campus Correspondent

A special University Senate ad-hoc committee on parking abuses has formulated a report concerning parking problems on campus and proposed several solutions, among which is a plan for a 65-car parking lot between the university co-op and the psychology building.

According to Steven Smith, a Senate committee member, the proposed plan, which comes up for vote on April 23rd, would provide parking for campus visitors, but would restrict student and faculty parking.

"The university does not project a very positive image with only limited parking space for visitors wishing to do business in the center of campus," Smith said. "The new parking lot would not be used by faculty or students but it will instead be reserved only for visitors and it would be patrolled and well-lighted to keep it that way.

Smith also said that the committee was concerned with preserving the natural landscape in the center of campus and that the new lot would be designed to provide student crossways and an attractive rock garden with park benches.

The parking lot proposal, however, was not the only recommendation made by the committee.

Robert Mettes, the committee's undergraduate student representative, said that the group has been meeting weekly for the last six weeks and that they made a variety of long and short-term proposals.

Mettes said the committee's report did not list the issues by priorities but instead concentrated on formulating a viable background of possible ideas for future Senate action.

Among the other proposals mentioned in the report was the construction of a new parking facility next to

CIA directed mining might not be resumed

WASHINGTON (AP)—As members of Congress voiced anger over covert U.S. activities in Nicaragua, Reagan administration officials said Wednesday that the CIA-directed mining of Nicaraguan harbors might not be resumed because of the mounting outcry against it.

A senior State Department official said the initial phase of the mining had been completed before the Senate overwhelmingly condemned the action Tuesday night in a non-binding resolution demanding that no federal funds be spent on the operation.

The official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said the CIA will be forced to halt support for anti-government guerrillas in Nicaragua if Congress rejects an administration request for $21 million to finance the insurgency.

The official said the current phase of the mining was completed a few days ago, and denied there was any "cause-and-

Torrington fights to keep campus open

By Andrea Williams
Wire Editor

In January, the Board of Governors for Higher Education voted to close the UConn Torrington branch blaming declining enrollment. If the regional campus were to close it would be in August of 1985, but 200 Torrington area residents and concerned individuals are doing everything they can to keep the regional campus open.

State law gives the General Assembly one year to override the Board's decision.

To meet this end, citizens were urged to contribute to the legal aid funds and to sign petitions at a Monday meeting. This was sponsored by the Litchfield County Committee on Higher Education and the Naugatuck Valley Project, a labor, church and citizen group, the Associated Press reported. Marvin Maskovsky, chairman of the Litchfield County committee, stated that the campus should be kept open.

Maskovsky, also the assistant superintendent of Torrington schools, did not specify what was the real cause of the Torrington regional campus closing, although he denied that it was declining enrollment. He also contended that area students are "being denied educational access...and that UConn has not supported the Torrington regional campus; if it did, there wouldn't be a cloud over it."

The enrollment at the branch has been declining over the past 10 years and mostly because of the "unwillingness on part of the students to enroll because of the uncertainty of the closing," said Mrs. Betty Tianti, finance member of the Board of Governors. Tianti believes the regional campus should remain open and "doesn't know where the lack of support came from," acknowledging that UConn has not given the campus support.

The Torrington branch was a gift from the late Mrs. Thompson of Torrington, who donated $750,000 toward the school. The town of Torrington gave 200 acres of the land.

Maskovsky feels that closing the regional campus would

Library increases acquisitions

By Lauren Ungaro
Campus Correspondent

The University library is "back on the track" in terms of funding for purchases acquisitions director David Garnes said Friday.

The acquisitions department, which orders research materials for the campus library and the university branches, has a budget for 1983-84 which is almost double that of 1981-82.

The 1983-84 budget is $1.56 million, up from $.84 million in 1981-82, a "terrible" year according to Garnes. The acquisitions budget for 1982-83 was approximately $1.18 million.

Garnes said the increase, which is due to greater contributions from the university and from private sources, has had several positive effects. The library automatically receives publications from 59 university presses now.

These publications, almost all of which the library keeps, had to be ordered separately before. Other improvements include the expansion of the serials collections (microtext, microfiche, and periodicals) much of which had been discontinued in 1981-82, and the preservation of old periodicals on microfiche.

Commentary

Look at the camera and smile

By John Yearwood and Scott McDonald

The Caribbean is in the midst of an identity crisis. Turn on any television set and the message is the the same a number of smiling native faces are shown waiting on North Americans with island music plays in the background. One of the women then looks into the camera and beckons you to "Come back to Jamaica..again, and again, and again..." Sadly, that's the stereotypical view most Americans have of the Caribbean.

The image is clear but the reality is different. Behind those smiling faces there lurks the frustration of living in a country with high unemployment and low per capita income for those fortunate enough to find jobs.

Jamaica is not unique. In 1983, Trinidad and Tobago, one of the Caribbean's richest countries, had a per capita income of $5,670, higher than that of Ireland or Spain. But, at the same time, Haiti had a per capita of $300, making it one of the world's poorest countries.

This wide discrepancy in the region makes one wonder how the smaller Caribbean countries can act in the international political economy.

What are their options? Many are attempting to follow what President Reagan calls "the magic of the marketplace" or state-capitalism which involves companies willing to share investment adventures with local economies.

State-capitalism in many cases leads to the states acquisition and operation of companies. In several Caribbean countries (i.e. Trinidad and Tobago) the government owns the public utilities, some banks, and dominates the oil industry.

Another alternative in the Caribbean basin is the socialist-revolutionary model used by several countries at odds with the United States. It involves heavy limitations on the private sector and attempts to create greater and more egalitarian distribution of national income.

This strategy is practiced by Cuba's Fidel Castro, Nicaragua's Sandinistas, and Jamaica under former Prime Minister Michael Manley.

Grenada, which followed the socialist-revolutionary path under former Prime Minister Maurice Bishop's New Jewel Movement received certain gains from it. These include an improved health care and social security system.

When U.S. troops "liberated" the island from the tyranical Austin regime late last year, Grenada's economy was transformed from socialist-revolutionary to one largely dependent on the U.S.

In an effort to revitalize Grenada's economy, the U.S. is pumping millions of dollars into the country and has even offered to pick up where the Soviet Union and Cuba left off by buying the island's exports and finishing the controversial airport at Point Salinas.

What role should the U.S. play in the Caribbean basin during the next few years? President Reagan's "magic of the marketplace" approach may have lost its glow to a younger generation frustrated with current situations who may experiment with more radical alternatives for which Bishop is a much admired example.

Grenada's revolution devoured itself in a bloodbath, but the example of its earlier accomplishments still linger in the minds of the people with the smiling faces on the commercials. Indeed, the smiles are only skin deep.

Letter to the Editor

Call the Escort Service, 486-4809

To the Editor:

I am a female undergraduate student at the University of Connecticut. This is not a letter about budget cutbacks or about the drinking age. This is a letter to raise the public awareness about one of the most serious problems at the university: the alarming amount of rape and sexual harassment that takes place here.

This is a threat that is very real to every woman who lives on or near the campus. It is unsafe to leave your room alone after dark. The university does provide an escort service for students. This service is available from 6 p.m. until 2 a.m., and the police state that if one needs to go somewhere at any other time they can call the police station and "if they are not too busy they can usually act as an escort." This is not common knowledge on the campus, nor is the rape problem.

If one needs to go somewhere slightly off of the campus, such as off-campus parking, the escort service will not be able to take her there. The campus is very poorly lighted. There is no lighting in several of the parking lots, nor is there adequate lighting near the Chemistry building, Storrs Hall, in between the Fine Arts and Drama-Music buildings, or around the Human Development Center. Many students have night classes, reviews, or necessary work to do in these buildings at night.

The dormitories are also unsafe. Anyone can get into any building at any time. I live on a single sex floor of a large coed dormitory and frequently see strange men on the floor at odd hours. The weekends are especially dangerous in the dorms. Because so many students go home it is easy for an attack to take place without anyone noticing or hearing. A better solution to locking the outer doors at 11 p.m. would be to have security guards who check that the person either lives in the dorm or is going to visit someone specific.

The reason that this is such a problem on campus is that most students who have not been raped or attacked do not know that there is a problem. The university jeopardizes the safety of the students because they do not want a bad name. If you are a UConn student, you are living in danger and should be aware of this problem. As a student of the university I urge everyone concerned to demand better safety and increased awareness here.

If you are a victim of rape on the UConn campus, you can call Student Health Services at 486-4700, 24 hours a day. The Northeastern Connecticut Rape Crisis Center also has a 24-hour hotline which is available for anyone in the area. Their number is 423-9201, extension 515.

Again, it is essential that action be taken immediately before this serious problem becomes worse.

...Library acquisitions department expects improvements with funding

Garnes was optimistic that the acquisitions department would continue to receive increased funding, and stressed that "we must try to support the academic programs on this campus." He feels confident that his goal of increasing next year's serials allotment by $50,000 will be reached, he sail.

The Second Century Fund, UConn's capital campaign, includes as one of its goals an endowment of $500,000 for the acquisitions department to be bused for materials.

David Kapp, associate director for Public Services, said Friday that library administrators will meet with university administrators this week in an attempt to redistribute the $500,000 endowment. Kapp said that the library needs staff.

He said the acquisitions department will probably have more money to spend next year, and that more staff people are needed. Kapp said that staff are also needed to repair books: "(Library employees) don't just shelve books." However, no new staff positions are expected to be filled next year.

Improvements are expected in library equipment. Kapp said that by fall 1984, the circulation and reserve sections of the library should have new equipment.

Towers Council and West Campus sponsor non-alcoholic casino night

By Jared Clark
Staff Writer

Remaining dedicated to sponsoring non-alcoholic events on campus, Towers Council, in conjunction with West Campus will hold a casino night open to all ages this Friday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Though a pub night or beerfest, in all likelihood, would be more profitable for both organizations, David Dwyer, a Towers Council representative and chairman of the casino night committee, said the council had several reasons for excluding alcohol at the social event.

We've been having a lot of mixers lately, basically because we can—we have one of the facilities on campus, in our quad, that allows us to have them," he said.

"But, a lot of people on the council expressed some disappointment about that, asking, 'What about minors?' So, we decided to have a campuswide social event that minors could attend. Secondly, we feel there is a need for social events that aren't based on alcohol," said Dwyer.

We went to the Board of Governors for ideas, and, being very supportive on non-alcoholic events, they suggested a casino night. It's been a popular event in the past, and, with the success of the recent non-alcoholic video dance party in the Student Union Ballroom, we felt safe in having it," he said.

Though preparation for the event, which included soliciting gift certificate donations from local merchants and obtaining a permit to allow the orgainzed gambling, has entailed more work than that for a mixer, Dwyer said the end result will reflect the extra effort.

"We're using a professional gambling company that puts on casino nights regularly," he said. "They'll supply two professionals who will train the student workers to run the games. The company also has the capacity to equip 39 tables with the five standard games: blackjack, craps, dice-in-a-cage, wheel-of-fortune and roulette," said Dwyer.

"With the two dollar entry fee you get $2500 in fake money to bet with as you wish. At midnight we'll have an auction which will include a portable black-and-white television and gift certificates ranging from five to 15 dollars from local stores. When people start bidding with all that money, it should get pretty fun."

David Hancock, Towers Council social chairman, was equally enthused. "I'm psyched about it," he said. "This event will show people that it's possible to have a good time at a non-alcoholic event."

"I think it's going to be really fun because it's going to expose people to high stakes gambling—the type of thing they usually only see on television."

Two alumni receive awards at Engineering Honors Banquet

By Ron Eckert
Campus Correspondent

Anthony D. Autorino and Franklin R. Chang, received awards last night at the Annual Engineering Honors Banquet in the Faculty Alumni Center.

Autorino received his Master of Science degree here in 1963 and was honored last night for his outstanding achievement in the the industry while employed by United Technologies at the Hamilton Standard Division.

Chang graduated from the university with the Bachelor of Science in Engineering in 1973. He was born in Costa Rica and moved to the United States in 1969. After mastering the new language he enrolled at the university in 1969. While an undergraduate he worked as a research assistant in the physics department.

"I received nothing but moral support and encouragement from the faculty here," Chang said. In 1977, he completed his doctorate at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

In May 1980 Chang was selected as a candidate in the astronaut training program. In 1981 he completed the one year training and evaluation, qualifying as a mission specialist.

After receiving his award Chang said, "I have a deep feeling of gratitude toward the state of Connecticut and the university that awarded me the scholarship that allowed me to eventually pursue the American dream."

be an "injustice" because it is the only Connecticut state university that does not have debts. The campus is within the largest state county (Litchfield), with the average commute being 3 hours to the nearest branch. The future of Northwestern Connecticut requires more education, not less, he said.

Maskovsky says that if the branch fails to stay open, the $3 million it is worth now will not go to UConn. Instead it would be reverted to Thompson's heir, he said.

The regional campus has so far received a flood of donation including $10,000 from the town of Torrington and excellent petitions, says Maskovsky. Although there is no set date, Maskovsky and other concerned individuals plan on going to the Governor, asking to provide moral leadership.

"Don't take it (the branch) from us...if you do, you're going to have a fight," Maskovsky said.

. . . On-campus parking proposed

McMahon Hall, Mettes said.

The proposed facility would compensate for 200 staff parking spaces which will be lost in the upcoming construction of the new athletic facility near the Field House.

For the long-run, Mettes said the committee proposed a plan for multi-level parking areas in South Campus and near the ROTC Hangar in North Campus. These areas would be created to help ease congestion of student parking space as well as provide more perimeter parking for visitors.

The group also proposed a future analysis of the ticketing procedure on campus in order to set more stringent guidelines on the university policy towards parking violations.

A widening of access roads to residence halls, parking meters, and slant parking spaces were also proposed by the committee to discourage people from parking all day in front of the dorms, Mettes said.

Mettes also said that the issue of parking problems on campus had been undertaken by the Senate before and the Undergraduate Student Government discussed the issue last year and came up with the same problems and similar solutions.

Both Mettes and Smith felt that the Senate's attitude seemed favorable before the vote. But Mettes did mention that what the Senate decides is not binding by the administration and Smith noted that the Senate does have the right to make amendments to the proposal.

Professor disapproves of Nicaraguan mining

By Carolyn Anderson
Campus Correspondent

American supervision of the mining of Nicaraguan waters is an act of war, John Plank, a political science professor said here Wednesday.

"It was a shock," Plank said in an interview from his office. "The United States, which has been the great advocate of international law and has insisted how important it is to criticize the violation of international law, now flaunts it. I find it bizarre."

The speed boats used to place the mines in shipping lanes, were transported to waters off Nicaragua by a modified vessel that serves as the nerve center for the operation. Plans for the missle placement were specifically prepared by Americans.

The mines have damaged vessels from six nations since March 1, including a Soviet freighter. Last Thursday France offered to help Nicaragua clear the mines and earlier this week Britain told the Reagan administration that it disapproved of the mining as an interference with international shipping.

"Our European allies have been critical of U.S. policies for years, and this only goes to reinforce it."

I think it (the mining) will go a long way in undercutting U.S. foreign policy in the eyes of the rest of the world," Plank said, whose background includes work under the Kennedy administration in Latin American affairs and six years in an administration think tank studying Latin American/U.S. issues. "Our European allies have been critical of U.S. policies for years and this only goes to reinforce it."

Neither the Senate nor House committees were informed about the mining or Central Intelligence Agency participation until recent weeks, although the Central Intelligence Agency is required by federal law to keep Congress informed about intelligence operations.

CIA officials still contend that Americans are not directly involved in military operations against Nicaragua but instead serve in an advisory capacity in international waters similiar to the role of Honduran-based Americans who supervise rebel ground forces inside Nicargua.

Plank said the mining may jeopardize more than the additional $21 million proposed for covert activities against Nicaragua. "It may also jeopardize further aid to El Salvador," he said.

The Speaker, Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said April 9 that the proposal for additional aid would not be approved by the House.

Tuesday, the Senate voted 82-12 in favor of a resolution urged by Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., that opposes the use of Federal funds to mine Nicaraguan waters.

Nicaragua has asked the World Court to declare U.S. support for guerilla raids on its territory illegal, including what it said was Washington's role in the mining. Plank said the U.S. is unwilling to take the case to World Court because it has no case.

U.S. budget deficits pose 'danger' for recovery of world's economy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Enormous budget deficits in the United States pose a "major potential danger" for the healthy recovery of the world's economy, the International Monetary Fund said Wednesday.

A report by the fund's staff said budget red-ink tends to keep interest rates higher than they would otherwise be. And that, it said, has "implications that go beyond the borders of the countries actually experiencing the deficits," particularly for developing nations struggling to repay their debts.

The report, called the World Economic Outlook, was released as the spring meeting of the 146-member organization got under way at the fund's Washington headquarters. In recent years, the IMF has been instrumental in fashioning aid packages for debt-stricken countries.

"Fiscal restraint is thus clearly needed, from an international as well as from a domestic standpoint," it said.

The fund staff study said "substantial progress" was made last year in coming to grips with those countries' debts, estimated at $669 billion in 1983 for developing nations which don't export oil.

...CIA halts mining

effect" connection with the burgeoning controversy over President Reagan's Central American policies.

Nonetheless, the official acknowledged that the CIA might be reluctant to resume mining after the Senate's 84-12 adoption of the anti-mining resolution sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and backed by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and GOP Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska.

President Reagan gave his written approval for the mining in February, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., disclosed Tuesday in a sharply critical letter to CIA director William Casey.

As Reagan toured a Ford assembly line in Claycomd, Mo., Wednesday, he was asked his reaction to the Senate resolution. "You wouldn't want to hear it," he replied. But Tuesday night, immediately after the Senate vote, the president told reporters that "if it's not binding, I can live with it."

Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam told a House hearing that the United States is not at war with Nicaragua but is engaged in "collective self-defense."

House nears decisive vote on deficit

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House on Wednesday approved the key element of the government's deficit-reduction effort—a $49 billion tax increase affecting liquor, cigarettes, telephones and businesses.

The bill was passed 318-97, with 223 Democrats and 95 Republicans supporting it and 31 Democrats and 66 Republicans voting no.

Although it was written by the Democratic-controlled Ways and Means Committee, it was backed by Republicans, in great part because it does not tamper with President Reagan's across-the-board tax cut for individuals. The Reagan administration supported the tax increase, provided it is followed by legislation to make major cuts in federal spending.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. hailed the bill as a fair one that "closes tax loopholes without hurting the average family.

"It rejects Reagan's 'supply-side' economics, puts the government on the firm footing of pay-as-you-go, and cuts the Reagan deficit," O'Neill said.

Astronauts replace defective electronics

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Challenger's astronauts replaced two defective electronic units on the Solar Max satellite during the longest space walk ever today and initial reports on the 300-mile-high repair job were "optimistic."

Strapped in a "cherry picker" on the end of the shuttle's robot arm, astronauts George Nelson and James van Hoften, called "Pinky" and "Ox" by their colleagues, took turns changing out the units in the open cargo bay.

Their repair shop, they said, had a view that "is a little unreal."

They had traveled 2 million miles to make their service call, during which repair work was done for the first time on a disabled satellite retrieved from orbit.

Mission Control logged the space walk at 7 hours 7 minutes, breaking by 6 minutes the old mark set by Skylab astronauts Jerry Carr and Bill Pogue in 1973.

After the repairs were completed, the mechanical arm lifted Solar Max up and over the side of the shuttle, holding it there while ground engineers switched on electrical power and monitored its systems.

Officials said it would be later today, perhaps early Thursday, before it is known whether the satellite is now healthy enough to be returned to its own orbit on Thursday to resume its sun study. A preliminary report: "All is looking optimistic."

State traffic fatalities increase

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP)--A rise in traffic fatalities this year is indicative that "Connecticut drivers are again becoming careless in their driving habits," says the commissioner of the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

Benjamin Muzio said statistics compiled by the department's Traffic Records Unit show that 91 people died in traffic accidents through April 1-24 more than the 67 who died in state traffic accidents in the same period last year.

According to the department, however, there were fewer traffic fatalities in 1983 than in any year since 1976.

I urge drivers to pay more attention to defensive driving and watch out for other vehicles," Muzio said in a news statement.

500 new jobs in state will be created

HARTFORD, (AP)—About 500 new jobs will be created in Connecticut now that the Connecticut Development Authority has approved nearly $45 million in low-cost financing for 21 projects.

John J. Carson, CDA chairman, said the increased activity demonstrates "a growing optimism in the Connecticut economy by business, but-it also reminds us of the plight of revenue bond financing in Congress."

Congressional proposals threaten the program "under the guise of attacking the federal deficit," he said.

"CDA provides the low-cost means for brick-and-mortar expansions by Connecticut industry, impacting nearly 125,000 jobs over the past 10 years," Carson said.

More than half of the approved financing-$28 million - will benefit projects in Hartford County, he said.

Nurse sentenced to gas chamber in 12 hospital deaths

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP)—A coronary-care nurse convicted of killing 12 elderly hospital patients with heart drug overdoses at two Riverside County hospitals was sentenced Wednesday to die in the gas chamber.

The sentence against Robert R. Diaz, 46, was handed down by Superior Court Judge John Barnard,who two weeks ago found the nurse guilty of murder in the series of deaths in March and April 1981 at Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris and San Gorgonio Pass Hospital in Banning.

Because of finding of "special circumstances" in the complex case, the judge had two options in passing sentence- death in the gas chamber or life imprisonment without possibility of parole.

Tiny balloon saves baby's life

FARMINGTON (AP)—Doctors at the UConn Health Center have proven that implantation of a tiny balloon in the brain of a very young patient can avoid dangerous brain surgery for a rare malady that deprives the brain of blood.

Fourteen-week-old Andre Comissiong is believed to be the smallest and youngest patient ever to have an "artery-vein fistula" corrected without surgery, Dr. Bruce C. Zablow said Wednesday.

Zablow explained the procedure at a Health Center news conference attended by Andre and his mother, Joy Comissiong of New Britain.

The first hint of a problem was a seizure that came within hours of Andre's "uneventful" birth Dec. 27 at New Britain General Hospital, said Zablow, assistant professor of radiology at UConn.

Andre was transferred the next day to the Health Center's newborn intensive care unit where a CAT scan revealed a hemorrhage inside the brain.

Further X-rays defined Andre's problem: The supply of oxygen-rich blood to the right half of Andre's brain was being diverted—shunted directly through an abnormal connection of a brain artery to a vein and returned prematurely to his heart and lungs.

"There are few, if any, reportable cases" of Andre's congenital condition, Zablow said.

While the right half of his brain could compensate for the shortage by drawing oxygen-rich blood from the left half, the vascular abnormality could eventually have overexerted Andre's heart. Heart failure is not uncommon in such cases, Zablow said.

Surgery to correct the problem would have involved "major neurosurgery to open the portion of the skull where the fistula was located," the doctor said.

The danger of bleeding during surgery would have made that option "extremely hazardous," he said.

On Feb. 10, when Andre was 6 weeks old, medical experts decided that implantation of a tiny balloon would block the abnormal connection between the jugular vein and external carotid artery.

In a three-hour procedure, a catheter with a balloon 0.04 inch in diameter on the tip was inserted into the artery and moved into Andre's brain to the point of the abnormal connection.

Ramblin' Rich-- UConn's own wandering minstrel

By Jane Mack
Campus Correspondant

He's hard to keep track of. You might see him working in Ryan Refectory or hustling through the Student Union or Kathy John's, but you probably know him best for his frequent guest appearances at campus parties.

He's known as "Ramblin' Rich" and he's UConn's own wandering minstrel. His instrument is the harmonica..his reward is the knowledge that he's made someone's day a little more enjoyable.

"I just like to get in with the crowd, have fun and introduce myself."

And helping people enjoy themselves is something Richard Miller has been doing for quite a while now. "About six years ago someone asked me if I knew how to play the harmonica, and I decided to give it a try, " he said as he lit a cigarette. "I took lessons with someone down at the music building. I can't remember his name-- a Polish guy with a beard."

Miller loved the harmonica from the start and has been playing it ever since. He smiled. "I found I had a natural ability for music. There are some songs I have to work at, but others, like "Johnny Be Good", just seem to come naturally to me."

He still feels there's room for improvement...lots of it. "When people find out I play the harmonica they want to know if I'm good," he said as he twisted his hands. "I tell them not yet, but I'm working on it."

Just as important to Miller as perfecting his talent is the chance to share it with others and that's why he enjoys playing at campus parties. "I like to play voluntarily because it gives me something to do, it helps me meet people, and it keeps my mind off my problems." He laughed. "I just like to get in with the crowd, have fun, and introduce myself. On Thursday night there are parties everywhere. People will-just come up to me and say, 'Hey Richie, We're having a party tonight, You can come up and play a few lines if you'd like.'"

Miller said he began playing at parties around campus about five years ago in Eddy Hall. "I talked to the president of the dorm, and he gave a note to the D.J. telling him to let me play a few songs," he said exhaling on his cigarette. "I ended up playing almost all night. Someone asked me if I wanted to get paid for it, but I said no."

Since then Miller has played at a countless number of parties and campus functions. "I usually don't play all night, though," he said. "I just play a few songs and then I dance and mingle a little."

Yet, out of all the parties at which he has played, one in particular has a very special place in his heart. "There was a party in Eddy Hall around Christmas one year, and I put on my Santa Claus outfit and bought some cases of beer for it, " he said moving his hands energetically as he spoke. "I came in and said, 'Santa's here. Has everyone been good? Come and get your favorite beer.' Then I played Christmas carols on my harmonica. It didn't hurt me at all to buy that beer. No sir, not at all."

Making other people happy is important to Miller and this past Christmas was no exception. He played at two holiday campus semi-formals. "One was in North campus on Dec. 3, and the other one was in the Wagon Shed."

The entertainment Miller provides might be free, but it does not go unappreciated. He smiled. "This past Christmas I received 50 Christmas cards in one day and 150 within a week."

Although Miller enjoys playing for campus functions it is not his only musical interest. He is a steady churchgoer, and his present goal is to play at St. Thomas Aquinas on Easter Sunday. "There's

Stuffing wild animals keeps taxidermist in business

By Christine Kotrba
Campus Correspondent

COVENTRY—Bob Kjellquist often gets phone calls from people who ask how much he charges per mile, but the car in his driveway has no meter in it, and it's certainly not used for public transportation.

That's because Kjellquist is a taxidermist, and many people, unfamiliar with the word, think that this is where they can find the local taxicab. "Taxidermy comes from a Greek word," he said. "'Taxi' means to move, and 'dermy' means skin. What we are is skin arrangers."

Kjellquist has been "arranging skin" for 27 years, and in 1979 was commissioned to do the bald eagle that now sits, with outstretched wings, in the lobby of the Life Sciences building here. His interest in animals dates back even further though, beginning during his childhood.

"My father taught me to hunt and fish when I was six or seven," he said. "And he used to raise game birds. On one occasion, he took me to a taxidermist's shop and like any young kid I was enthralled.

"After I got married, I started it as a hobby," he said. From 1957 to 1971 I was a policeman in Rockville, and then I was the police chief in Willimantic until 1980. All the time I did taxidermy to relax and as a hobby. Beginning in 1980, I did it full time."

Kjellquist's full-time business takes up two rooms in his home. The first is spacious, well-lit, and looks like an office, kitchen, and carpentry shop all in one. To the right of the door is Kjellquist's desk, covered with books, newspaper clippings, and notices to his customers saying which animals are ready to be picked up. On the wall above his desk is a calender, framed news clippings and diplomas, and pictures of wildlife.

The back wall resembles a small kitchen. There is a refrigerator, where he keeps some of the skins to be mounted, a sink, cabinets, and a counter. On the wall, diagrams are neatly tucked in a clipboard. This is where Kjellquist processes animal hides.

His tools—scissors of all kinds, saws, files, and rasps—are arranged in trays on the counter. He points to an orange-peeler lying next to a paring knife and a scalpel. "I stole that out of my wife's kitchen," he said. "It's a good sculpturing tool when I model inside the nostrils, or around the lip area and eyelids."

The area near the left wall resembles a carpenter's workshop. The counter is littered with antlers, wood scraps, paint, and brushes. More wildlife photos line the walls. The workshop is many rooms in one.

And if the workshop is diverse, Kjellquist is even more so, for taxidermy requires that he knows a lot. "There's a host of things a taxidermist must know," he said as he reached for a match and lit his pipe. "I use chemistry, carpentry, skinning, sculpting, painting, and hairdressing. Actually, it's furdressing, but it's the same thing. I use the same products on the fur that you use on your hair," he said.

"You also have to have a mechanical aptitude," Kjellquist said. When I build a mannequin, I have to know how a foot moves. Usually I use reference books and photographs to learn. If I go to a doctor's office and they have magazines there with pictures that I can use, when I leave, half the magazine is gone. A lot of learning is done by trial and error."

After 27 years of learning, Kjellquist, 48, still hasn't lost his interest or love for taxidermy. "It makes me feel good when people look at my work and say it looks alive," he said. "People would look at my work and say, 'That's near enough to be real,' so that's how I came to call my shop Nere-Nuff Taxidermy." "I do about 130 pieces a year, and generally my customers are deer hunters and fishermen. I don't usually do pets," said Kjellquist as he pressed the tip of his pipe against his lips. "I have done pets, but most of the time I get burnt. The customer doesn't want to know anything about Jasper nine months later, when he's finished, and I'm stuck with him. Or they'll say, 'Gee, he never looked like that.' Pets aren't as much of a creative challenge as wildlife is, anyway."

Because of the problems Kjellquist has encountered in doing pets as well as other animals, he now requires that his customers leave a deposit before he will work on any piece. "A lot of things can happen when a man brings a deer head in," he said. "He may move away, die, lose his job, or lose the money in the next nine months. Some wives will tolerate hunters, but will say, "You're not bringing that home to hang on my wall! So, after nine months, I have a deer head, and I don't need it."

Apart from the wives, Kjellquist said that nobody isn't satisfied with his work. "Only this one hymn I really want to play," he said, and the hummed the beginning of it. "It's called 'On This Day."

Miller usually gets to play at the church on holidays. "During Christmas I played in the center there," he said. "I dressed as Santa Claus and played Christmas carols." He looked down. "I do it voluntarily, so people know I'm not out for a fast buck. I'm there because I want to be part of everything and help everyone have a good time."

But keeping other people happy isn't all that's important to Miller. He also works to improve his playing ability for his own personal satisfaction. Besides practicing on his own every morning, two or three times a week he practices with other musicians around campus. "It really helps to get together and play with other people," he said as he banged his fist on his knee. "I like criticism--do you know what I mean? I need someone to say, 'That was awful; try that again', or 'Work on this.'"

Miller recently took an art appreciation course at the University and became interested in painting. "I also found I have natural ability for oil painting," he said as he laughed. "I never knew I had any talent. I've been finding out a lot of things about myself these past few years that I never knew."

He feels that this is probably true of many people. "People should consider things like music and art and check out their own ability. They might find out they have a talent they never knew they had if they keep working at it," he said.

He smiled. "Take me for example. People tell me I'm one of a kind, but deep down I know there's always room for improvement...always something to work on."

...Taxidermist tells tricks of his trade

one person has ever come back," he said. "He wanted a skin-mounted shark. That is very difficult to do, and I knew it would be a problem. He took it home, and then brought it back. so it could be repaired. Only one, knock on wood, has come back, though.

"I remember one woman," he said, "who called me, and wanted me to make a squirrel with antlers. I don't like doing novelty taxidermy, and when she said that she wanted to play some joke on her husband, I told her that my work isn't a joke. I made her the squirrel, but I didn't make the antlers permanent, and I showed her how to remove them."

Kjellquist opened a door on the right-hand side of his workshop and entered another room, where his wildlife is displayed. Dressed in a gray cardigan, a blue shirt, blue workpants, and leather moccasins, he looked almost as comfortable as his animals. His glasses hung loosely around his neck.

He explained the steps, from start to finish, to do a piece. "First, the hunter should get the animal here as soon as possible. He'll get a better job if he does," Kjellquist said. "I take the skin off, clean it and preserve it, using chemicals like formic acid and allym sulfate. The preserved skin is arranged on a mannequin, and the mannequin is posed. It is left to dry, and then the finishing work is done," he said. "Any membranes, for example, lips, bills, and birds' feet, will lose their color, and must be painted. Plastic teeth are put in, as the original ones get yellow, crack, and even fall out," he said. "Glass eyes are also inserted. From start to finish, a project can take from four to six months, but I usually tell a customer six to nine months, just to be safe."

Though Kjellquit's customers appreciate his work, he feels that the general public is quite ignorant about taxidermy. "Most people think that a taxidermist just does the deer head hanging on the wall," he said. "We don't only service the sportsman, we also do it for the general public, as in museums. He wouldn't, however, trade Nere-Nuff Taxidermy for anything. "I loved my law enforcement career, but I love this too. I consider myself fortunate to be able to make the midlife change," he said as he walked toward the door. Kjellquist flicked off the light and closed the door for the night, but only after giving one last glance at his animals, much like a mother tucking in her children.

Film Review:

Most sensitive film receives absurd review

By Neil Jones
Arts Editor

Easy Rider, currently playing at the Trans-Lux College Cinema, is a great movie. True, it is a series of vignettes hastily pasted together of two guys riding around on motorcycles with hip music and a wide open America around them. And the dialogue is slangy and dated. The characters are fairly two-dimensional and they come and go without explanation and...but Easy Rider is really good. I guess I'm not making my case.

Easy Rider is a great movie in the same way that Waiting for Godot is a great play. That is, not to bring literary references into this (although it couldn't hurt if it could convince you), Easy Rider is a king of day-glo existentialism, psychedelic Kafka. Easy Rider has all those prerequisite Kafka. Easy Rider has all those prerequisite '60s scenes, the Trip, the Commune, the Conflict with the Establishment, etc, etc, Maybe in the '60s and early '70s it was really hip and groovy, man. And then later it was naive and idealistic, but now maybe it can just be a movie. So if you dwell on the obvious mystical symbolism and the heavy message you may miss all the good parts. And the funny parts, which are many.

In Waiting for Godot two tramps sit around and do nothing forever and then a rich fat man comes on stage and they kick him around. In Easy Rider two guys ride around on a mythic American countryside and get involved in stereotypical conflicts and then they die. They get shot for no reason. Am I making a case?

Easy Rider is like a Nazi propaganda newsreel. No it's not. It's like a fairy tale, but not really. The music is pretty second-rate, heavy, cozmik...but so what. Go see it if you can or if you haven't. The tickets are cheap.

Easy Rider is at the Trans-Lux until April 14. Really, I swear it's good, but try to sit up front so you can hear everything and check out the cool bikes.

'The Who' guitarist calls wife 'a dog'

LONDON (AP)—The estranged wife of The Who guitarist John Entwhistle has won damages over an outburst on television in which he called her "a dog."

At a hearing Tuesday, Alison Entwhistle, 38, won undisclosed damages from Channel 4 television and Goldcrest Films, which produced the offending interview with the rock star.

"Every dog has its day, and today I've had mine," she told reporters after the hearing.

She said she had not sued her husband because he had apologized to her and their 12-year-old son and asked that the remark be cut from the film before broadcast.

Mrs. Entwhistle was in good spirits after her victory, joking that the case "has been a bone of contention for over a year."

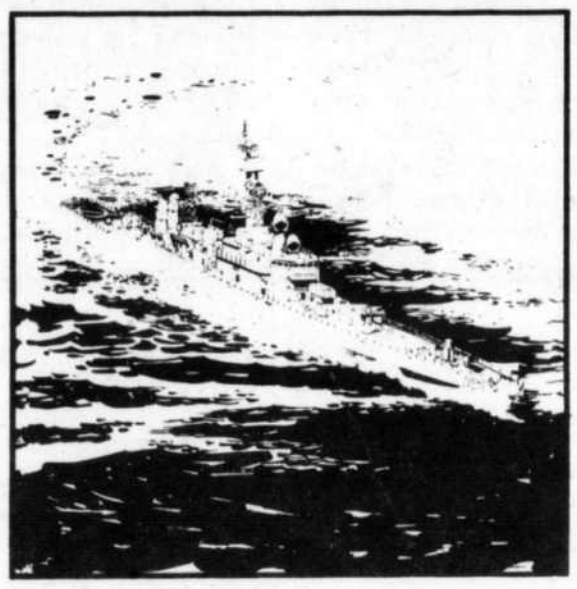
The Most Sophisticated Training Ground For Nuclear Engineering Isn't On The Ground.



It's on a Navy ship.

The Navy has more than 1,900 reactor-years of nuclear power experience—more than anyone else in America. The Navy has the most sophisticated nuclear equipment in the world. And the Navy operates over half of the nuclear reactors in America.

With a nuclear program like that, you know the Navy also offers the most comprehensive and sophisticated nuclear training.

Every officer in the Nuclear Navy completes a full year of graduate level technical training. Outside the Navy, this kind of program would cost you thousands. In the Navy, you're paid while you learn.

Then, as a nuclear-trained officer, you supervise highly trained personnel in the operation of the most advanced nuclear propulsion plants ever developed. You get a level of technical and management experience unequalled anywhere else.

You get important responsibilities and you get them fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so do your responsibilities.

Today's Nuclear Navy is one of the most challenging and rewarding career choices a man can make. And that choice can pay off while you're still in school. Qualified juniors and seniors earn approximately $1,000 per month while they finish school.

As a nuclear-trained officer, after 4 years with regular promotions and pay increases, you can be earning as much as $40,500. That's on top of a full benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned each year.

As a nuclear-trained officer, you also earn a place among this nation's most qualified and respected professionals. So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, send in the coupon. Find out more about the most sophisticated training ground for nuclear engineering. Today's Nuclear Navy.

NFL draft news

Pats sign Fryar to contract

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP)—Irving Fryar has signed a four-year contract with the New England Patriots, who said Wednesday they will make the Nebraska wide receiver the top pick in the National Football League draft, still nearly three weeks away.

Because the Patriots have the first choice, NFL Rules allow them to sign a player before the May 1 draft, said Jim Heffernan, the league's director of public relations.

"They've assured us that they are going to draft him first, so it's O.K.," Heffernan said.

He added that the Patriots' action was the first pre-draft signing since the NFL and American Football League held their first combined draft in 1967.

New England General Manager Patrick Sullivan announced the agreement Wednesday at a news conference.

The Patriots, who owns the top pick for the second time in three years, acquired it April 4 in a trade with Cincinnati. New England gave up two first-round picks this year, the 16th and 28th overall, a 10th-round choice this year, and a fifth-round selection in 1985.

This year's top pick originally belonged to Tampa Bay, which traded it to Cincinnati for quarterback Jack Thompson.

The Patriots took defensive lineman Ken Sims of Texas with the top choice in 1982 and came very close to obtaining last year's first pick from Baltimore, which they would have used to draft quarterback John Elway, said Sullivan.

The speedy Fryar rose to the top of this year's draft class after United States Football League teams signed Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier, a running back who was Fryar's college teammate, and Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young.

They hope the 5-foot-11½, 205-pound Fryar will take some pressure off wide receiver Stanley Morgan, who has led the team in receptions in three of the last four seasons. Morgan caught 58 passes last year but frequently was double teamed because New England had no outstanding pass-catching threat to complement him.

Fryar caught only 27 passes in his first three seasons at Nebraska, but, as a senior, was a double threat. He caught 40 passes for 780 yards and eight touchdowns, and ran 23 times for 318 years and two touchdowns.

He also kicks for the Cornhuskers. During his college career, Fryar ran back 60 punts for 708 yards and three touchdowns and 11 kickoffs for 262 yards.

Newlywed Rose still one hit short of record

CINCINNATI (AP)—Pete Rose took five walks Wednesday—four to first base and one down the aisle.

The Montreal left fielder got married in his hometown early Wednesday, then went 0-for-1 with four walks in the Expos' 9-3 afternoon victory over the Cincinnati Reds to remain one hit shy of 4,000.

His next shot at that mark will come in Montreal's home opener Friday night against the Philadelphia Phillies, the other team for which he has played.

"I'm going to get another hit this year. I'm not worried about that," Rose said. "I'm just happy we won today's game. I'm a little disappointed, but it was just one of those things that happen."

The wedding, Rose's second, was a private ceremony at his attorney's office. He married 29-year-old Carol Woliung of Lawrenceburg, Ind.

"It was a short ceremony this morning, that's all," Rose said, shrugging it off. "That's something you do on your way to getting 4,000.

"I had to get married because that was the only way I could get her on the team plane back to Montreal. Only wives are allowed on the plane."

With the nuptials behind him, Rose turned his attention to getting the lone hit that keeps him from the plateau reached only by Ty Cobb.

He swung only once, fouling off a pitch, while drawing walks in his first three trips to the plate against starter Bruce Berenyl. He walked on a 3-2 count and a pair of 3-1 counts, while the fans booed Berenyl's wildness.

Rose hit the first pitch back to reliever Frank Pastore in the sixth, and drew a walk on a 3-1 count from Pastore in his last at bat in the eighth.

Fans tossed debris on the field when Rose was taken out for a pinch runner, and Pastore was booed when he was removed.

"The only bad thing about the whole day, I think, is I didn't like the reaction toward Pastore," Rose said. "He was just trying to do his job."

Cobb set the all-time record of 4,191 hits in 24 major-league seasons with Detroit and Philadelphia in the American League.

Celtics prove superiority in victory over Knicks

BOSTON (AP)—Coach Hubie Brown of the New York Knicks stood in the hall saluting superstar Larry Bird and the Boston Celtics.

Brown, his assistants and even the team trainer had been ejected from the dressing room. On the other side of the locked door the Knicks held a private meeting for about 25 minutes.

A few doors away, in the Boston dressing, the Celtics took everything in stride Wednesday night after outduelling the Knicks for a 102-96 National Basketball Association victory.

With the best regular season record (61-19) wrapped up, and supposedly getting ready for the playoffs, the Celtics have won nine games in a row for the third time, the longest winning streak in the 1983-4 NBA campaign.

"The idea was to use this game as a prep for the playoffs," Boston coach K.C. Jones said. "Before the game I told Robert (Parrish) he would play about 15-20 minutes and Larry (Bird) he would play 20-25 minutes.

"With Larry and Robert on the bench in the third quarter, we got up to a 14-point lead, but then New York really started to come back. I said to hell with the rest, let's go for the win."

The Knicks closed to within 77-70 with an 8-1 spurt at the end of the third period. Then they gotto be within two in the finale, only to be frustrated by Bird and Parrish.

"It was like a playoff game," said Kevin McHale, who led the Celtics with 30 points, including 14 in the third period. "The Knicks had been saying they were a better team because they beat us three times this year. We wanted to prove to ourselves and to them that we are the better team."

Ford hits 'Grand Slam; Hickey wins game in relief

By Bob D'Aprile
Sports Editor

NEW YORK—Dave Ford could not have planned it any better. The junior first baseman for the baseball team has been having his problems with the bat this season but Wednesday at Shea Stadium he made people forget about that with one swing of his bat.

Ford smashed a grand slam home run with two outs in the top of the ninth inning to lead the Huskies to an 8-7 victory over St. John's. Kevin Hickey earned the win for UConn in relief while Joe Frager came on in the ninth, getting the final two outs, to gain a save.

With the win UConn improves its record 8-10 while St. John's, winners over Seton Hall Tuesday, drops to 8-4. The game was originally scheduled for Redmen Field at St.John's but the television crew for the New York Mets needed a practice game to prepare for the Mets' home opener next week. The two teams provided the crew with one of the most exciting games since the Mets were in the World Series in 1973.

Trailing 5-4 after eight innings, the Huskies watched their first two batters in the ninth, Ed McMillan and Paul Tinkham, make the first two outs (a ground out and a strike out) before St.-John's reliever James Biscaglia lost his composure. Biscaglia hit Dave Darling with a pitch and then Bill Crowley reached base on a walk. Jerry LaPenta followed with a ground ball to second base that Doug Manfredonia mishandled to load the bases for Ford.

The right handed junior fell behind in the count 0-2 before sending a fastball into the left field bullpen, more than 350 feet from home plate, to put the Huskies ahead 8-4. "It(the pitch) was a tailing fastball," said Ford, who also had an RBI single in the eighth. "I was just trying to get a single and tie the score. One pitch and suddenly I'm a hero. If it weren't for the three guys ahead of me I would never have had the chance to come up."

"I only wish my father was here to see what happened," added Ford, who now has 11 runs batted in this season.

Ford's heroics almost went unnoticed when the Redmen waged a serious comeback in their half of the ninth. Lou Blanco led off the inning with a triple to right center and he immediately scored when Tony Bonura sent a sacrifice fly to center which cut the UConn lead to 8-6.

Redmen Tom Finke and Doug Manfredonia battered UConn reliever Kevin Hickey, who replaced starter Mark Thalmann in the sixth, for consecutive singles before Husky head coach Andy Baylock called in Frager for relief. What followed was a very confusing play.

Dennis Sutton flied out to left field for the second out of the inning while Finke tagged up at third attempting to score. Kuselias' throw appeared to be on time at the plate but Finke was called safe by the umpire. UConn catcher Paul Tinkham recovered after the play to catch Manfredonia trying to advance to third for a game-ending double play.

"It was a fly ball to Chris (Kuselias), not too deep," Tinkham said after the game in the locker room. "It was a good throw and it went through the runner's legs. He slid on the outside of the line and I tripped his foot when I went for the throw. When I got up after the collision my first reaction was to show the umpire that I held on to the ball. While I waited for a call, I heard Ed McMillan yell to throw to third and the game was over.

"The runner was definitely out at the plate."

Darling put the Huskies ahead 1-0 in the first inning with a solo home run over the right field wall. "The pitch was right there, down the middle," Darling said. "It was a 3-1 fastball. Of course it's great to hit a home run in a major league ballpark but just playing at Shea is a plus in itself."

St.John's tied the score in their half of the first before Darling hit an RBI double to left center in the third giving the Huskies a 2-1 lead. The Redmen tied the game 2-2 behind an RBI single by Finke.

LaPenta's single to right in the sixth scored Darling from second for a 3-2 UConn lead. In the bottom of the sixth, St.John's went ahead 5-3 with three runs, the last of which was the result of a fielding error by UConn leftfielder Rick Veneziano. Veneziano lost the ball in the glare of the sun enabling Redmen shortstop Tom DeCeglio to score all the way from first base.

"Rick (Veneziano) got underneath it," Darling said. "He just lost the ball in the sun. Rick did all he could do. The sun was brutal."

But despite the error, crucial at the time, the Huskies managed to come home with a victory. "The most important thing is that we beat St.John's," Baylock said. "It was a great experience for everyone to play at Shea Stadium but the primary reason we were here was to win the game."

"It's never a dull game when we play St.John's," Baylock added. "Every single time it turns out to be a hair-raiser."

And Dave Ford played his part in this 'hair-raiser' to a tee.

HUSKY NOTES: The two teams were asked to share the same locker room at Shea Stadium. The players dressed and showered in the former locker room of the New York Jets...St.John's is scheduled to play New York Tech at Shea Stadium today...Ford's grand slam was the second in his life. He hit his first one as a junior in high school with two outs in the ninth inning...the Huskies will play at home Friday against Northeastern at 3 p.m.

Caprio takes medal

Golf team beats Springfield

AGAWAM, Mass.—The one-two punch of seniors Mike Caprio and Dan Keefe did it again for the golf team, taking the top two spots to help the Huskies defeat Springfield and raise the Huskies record to 5-1.

Caprio shot a 76 while Keefe shot 77 on the par-70 course at Oak Ridge Country Club.

The Huskies took the top five spots in the match, with the closest Springfield golfer shooting an 85. Dan Hendrickson (78), Tim Heaney (80), and Rich Toner (80) all finished in the top five for UConn.

The win was reminiscent of Tuesday's match when Caprio and Keefe were also the top two finishers, Keefe shooting a one-under-par 70 and Caprio finishing at par.

The Huskies will now travel to West Point, N.Y. for the Black Knight Invitational to be held this Friday and Saturday. This is the third year UConn has taken part in the tournament, which features some of the toughest teams in the Northeast, including St. John's, Rutgers, Army, Iona and Manhattan.
